1992: Successfully won dispute in which Warner Bros. studio claimed they retained rights to James Dean's image. Roesler argued that relatives of the deceased have the rights, and the court agreed. Countless stars and their estates have since used the landmark case to effectively protect and market their names and likenesses.

1993: Won court case against movie director Spike Lee over use of the "X" used in association with Malcolm X. Malcolm's widow, Betty Shabazz, was awarded rights and Lee was ordered to pay a licensing
